It is quite possible that there may be many more commentaries in Sanskrit.<sup>42</sup> It is noteworthy that most of the commentators hail from South India. Lokanātha Cakravarti is a Bengali commentator who freely quotes from the commentaries of Sarvajña Nārāyaṇa and Vimalabodha who might be Northern and who are the commentators on the Mahābhārata also. Their Rāmāyaṇa commentaries are not at present available and Lokanātha Cakravarti is the only available source for their views.

Sarvajña Nārāyaṇa probably flourished between A.D. 1100 and 1300.<sup>43</sup> It seems that the same scholar has also written (1) Manvarthavivṛti a commentary on the Manusmṛti, (2) Kāmadhenu-dīpikā and (3) Śuddhidīpikā.<sup>44</sup> An attempt is here made to collect all the passages attributed to Sarvajña Nārāyaṇa in the commentary of Lokanātha Cakravarti published in the Calcutta Sanskrit Series, No. 2, Calcutta, as Fragments of Sarvajña Nārāyaṇa's commentary on the Rāmāyaṇa.
